

Geomorphology Hike

The Geomorphology Hike is a 3.5 km self-guided loop through the scenic lake and upland country of the Haliburton Highlands. Allow at least 2 hours for the hike. The numbered sections of the guide correspond to the numbered posted along the trail with redtops.

NOTE: The hike follows along two different trails, the Acclimatization Trail (red markers) and the Steep Rock (green markers).

Watch for the red “Geomorphology Hike” directional signs at trail intersections.

Sections of the trail can be rugged but should pose no special difficulties for hikers. Footwear with good support and some water resistance is suggested. Bug repellent is strongly recommended in the late spring and summer months.
